Dear Mr. Blittersdorf:

I write to address concerns you have raised about certain campaign statements I made toward the end of the 2010 Vermont governor's race. Those statements were directed at Mr., now Governor-Elect Shumlin, but also discussed your relationship with him. My intent as to those statements was only to raise concerns relating to our opponent as Vermonters decided who would be their next governor, not to attack you personally. I appreciate, however, that you are upset with the statements and any inference that you acted unethically. I never intended to suggest that you had done anything unethical and I want you to understand my actions were neither malicious nor aimed at you. I apologize that my comments were interpreted as a personal attack on you and wish you the very best.

Sincerely,

Corry Bliss
